Territorio bene comune

Comunità, Paesi
e Paesaggi come patrimonio territoriale
e risorse per fronteggiare
la crisi ecologica.

Giovedì 22 giugno 2023
Ore 17:30 (ora italiana)
Meeting online

On June 22, the 1st International Conference "Territory Common Good. Communities, Countries and Landscapes as Territorial Heritage and Resources to Cope with the Ecological Crisis," was co-organized by Arci Solidarietà Viterbo srl Impresa Sociale, The Nature Reserve Riserva del Lamone and the Municipality of Farnese (Vt), as part of the PRO.GRE.S.S. project (CERV program). Inland areas, small rural towns and communities inhabiting marginalized territories, can play a role in offering local solutions to global issues such as climate change and the ecological crisis. Countries and territories that are often perceived more as places in negative, failing, always lacking something (of stimuli, services, possible futures), are often inhabited by rhetoric that struggles to enhance and incentivize the vision of what is still there or could become there again. We believe that countries need to be looked at from a different perspective, one that highlights their resources, in terms of landscape, food and wine, environmental heritages, and ecosystem services, etc., it is important to return to focusing on what is present, reversing precisely the "metropolycentric" perspective that has created and creates distortions and inequalities.

To bring about a paradigm shift and thus a shift in perspectives, experts from different backgrounds were called to speak.

Interviews have also been held regularly since March to learn about local people and their stories.
